Commissioner for Patents

The Appellant's Reply Brief is noted.

The Examiner further wishes to make the following points. Now new rejection has been made. The same art and same rejectin has been employed. No rule dictates that new points cannot be raised, and indeed this is often necessary in the face of new points that are raised by an Applicant or Appellant.

Further, the Examiner emphases that limitations were never characterised as meaningless. Instead, the Examiner noted that the limitations in question require only that a system is capable of performing certain actions.
